LEGACY Energy Solutions Adds
Industry Heavyweight to Leadership Team

HOUSTON (Mar. 5, 2009) – LEGACY Energy Solutions (LEGACY), a Houston-based provider of energy management solutions to commercial, industrial and governmental consumers, has hired industry veteran and risk management expert Ron Fort to serve as the company’s Director of Transaction Structuring.

Fort, a master in the area of pricing curves and structuring, will expand LEGACY’s current footprint in ERCOT and across the U.S. by providing advanced customer energy price modeling tools and state-of-the-art applications for power purchasing and monitoring energy usage for their businesses. In his more than 35 years of experience, Fort has assembled an extensive background and depth of expertise in power price management, risk management programs and analysis, pipeline logistics and energy efficiency programming.

“We are very fortunate to have someone with Ron’s capabilities and insights join LEGACY’s organization,” said John Elder, President and CEO of LEGACY. “Ron has tremendous expertise and has enjoyed significant success in developing customer specific applications to manage energy risk. His analysis, discipline and commitment to transparency will help our customers make more informed decisions about how and when to capture market opportunities.”

Prior to joining LEGACY, Fort served as a senior analyst/manager of price structuring for Amerex Retail Energy Services. He also has worked throughout the industry in the areas of pipeline supply and distribution, energy efficiency and deregulation programs and energy brokerage.

Fort is a native of Houston and received an associate of business administration degree from Oxford College of Emory University. He also attended Houston Baptist College and the University of Houston Law School. Fort is an active volunteer with the Houston Livestock Show & Rodeo. He is a member of the Emory at Oxford Alumni Association and enjoys hunting, fishing and golf.
